Hello Karen,

You never need to apologize for help! I am happy to supply it how I can and welcome the chance to assist you in the important work of preservation.

In my limited experience, I have always seen the Town appoint a Study Committee to create the Study Report for a new Local Designation, regardless of existing Historic District Commissions. The exact wording of CGS Section 7-147b(a) makes it clear, to my reading, that the Town Council still needs to approve the appointment of the HDC to a historic district study committee for the purpose of making an investigation and submitting a report. 7-147c(b) specifically states "by following the procedure for creation... in section 7-147b." So, I would say explicitly that you NEED approval from the Town Council before you can move forward with a Study Report.

I've CC'd my colleague Stacey Vairo who does Historic District Commission Trainings, and our colleague Mary Dunne from the State Historic Preservation Office who reviews Study Reports and also does Historic District Commission Trainings. If they have anything else to add or correct, please feel free to jump in.

Best,
Stefon
